Amherst, Apr. 7th. 1889

My dear sister:

Somewhere I got the idea into my head that you had an agreement with Eva that she should write you of our arrival home; but she seems not to have so understood it; and you have been left a week without a word. I tried that you have consoled yourself with the thought "that no news is good news". Such at any rate it would have been in this case. We had no special adventure until we were on the Amherst car, which was dreadfully hot.
Then judging Sumner to be sleepy, with my little buz-z-z-z - I attempted to put him to sleep. He yelled enough to narrow the car; but I would not give up and after about an hour of it, he gave up and went off. Then at the station here, the depot carriage was filled before we got to it and we had to wait fifteen minutes for another.

Am sorry I did not write, but I think Will was going to, and was very busy. I have put Baby into short clothes today I must have lost it here I hope you find the envelope? I think

What we get home in pretty good shape and all had a good night's sleep. Sumner was a little fussy for a few days; but took regular naps and slept well nights - always being put down awake, and soon came out all bright as a button. I think he is better now than he has ever been, and the scales this morning show a gain in spite of his journey of a half pound in the last two weeks - Fast day I eat for my photo; yesterday Eva, Rae & Sumner sat. I have seen my proofs; and think the likeness will be good. Hope the other will be good also. I seem to have left Sumner's little pillow behind, I am hoping it was found and put into the boxes with my other things. If they chance not to have been yet packed, will you please have the pillow put in. Rae was off to school Tuesday morning and seems to enjoy it more and more if that be possible. I hope you are feeling less pain and getting your courage nearly up to the point of starting for here. How is Ed.? Tell him that I have not forgotten the prescription but it will take a little time. With love Will -
